2008 The fifth and final title in the Australians on the Western Front Series examines the experiences of Australians fighting in France during the final months of the First World War under Australian commander Lieutenant General Sir John Monash. In August 1918, the Australian

Corps spearheaded a fresh British offensive and the diggers' progress exceeded anything they had done before. Soon after came the combined attacks on Mont St Quentin and Peronne. More Victoria Crosses were awarded for actions here than in any other Australian operation. By the end of September the Australians were confronting the Hindenburg Line. Soon Australian and American forces broke through the heavily protected German defensive zone, though at great human cost. Written by the Australian War Memorial's Peter Burness and illustrated with more than 120 full-page photographs. 1981 The March of medicine through Wisconsin is a fascinating story, full of triumph and failure, heroes and quacks, and -- overriding all -- stuttering steps toward a modern system of health care that has witnessed the doubling of life expectancies among Wisconsin citizens. This is the story of medicine in Wisconsin, told by professional historians, each speaking from his or her area of specialty. Since territorial times, the physician has risen from a position of marginal respectability to one of unparalleled admiration and trust. The hospital, unknown to residents just 150 years ago, has become a symbol of modern science and a source of civic pride. Knowledge of disease has revolutionized health practices. The purpose of this book is not to celebrate the achievements of Wisconsin's physicians, notable as they have been, but to look critically and sympathetically at the state's medical record. The contributors make no exaggerated claims for Wisconsin. Occasionally, the state led the nation in health matters, but more often it followed the example of others. With this book, the reader will come to understand how and why Wisconsin's medical practice evolved. - Jacket flap.
